INTRODUCTION

DATA COLLECTION DESCRIPTION

The National Survey of Prosecutors (NSP) is a biennial survey of chief prosecutors in State court systems. A "chief prosecutor" is an official, usually locally-elected and typically with the title of district attorney or county attorney, who is in charge of a prosecutorial district made up of one or more counties, and who conducts or supervises the prosecution of felony cases in a State court system. Prosecutors in courts of limited jurisdiction, such as municipal prosecutors, were not included.

The third NSP survey was conducted in the summer months of 1995 and yielded the data file, NATIONAL PROSECUTORS SURVEY, 1994, described in this codebook. The NSP 1994 survey sample of 308 chief prosecutors was drawn from among the total of nearly 2,350 across the country. The data collection instrument was a mailed questionnaire. The survey's purpose was to obtain detailed descriptive information on prosecutors' office, as well as information on their policies and practices.

DEVELOPMENT OF SURVEY INSTRUMENT

The contents of the questionnaire, used in the 1994 NSP, were based on the questions that had been included on the 1992 NSP. The Bureau of Justice Statistics (BJS) staff also worked closely with the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, the Office of Victims of Crime and the National District Attorneys Association to develop new survey questions. Other areas of current concern, covered in 1994 but not 1992 include:

- * cross-designation of state prosecutors to try cases in Federal court;
- * juvenile transfers to criminal court;
- * personal liability insurance for members of prosecutors;
- * and involvement with community-based drug abuse programs.

The questionnaire was pre-tested in several prosecutors' offices and received Office of Management and Budget (OMB) approval.

Several of the survey questions, which asked about staffing, total budget, workload, and juvenile transfers to criminal court, required quantitative answers. However, the questionnaire primarily relied on multiple choice queries, with the inclusion of an "other (please specify)" provision to find out what other categories applied in actual practice. This codebook provides itemizations of the responses to the "other (please specify)" queries.

Respondents were instructed that the data supplied should relate to a "reference year" running January 1, 1994 through December 31, 1994. If the respondent had data for some other recent one-year time interval, the beginning and end points were to be stated. Nearly all respondents were able to supply information relating to the requested reference year.

Respondents were asked to provide information for their entire prosecutorial district. While some prosecutorial districts encompass more than one county, the majority (89%) of chief prosecutors served only one county.

DATA COLLECTION PROCEDURES

The survey was conducted by means of a mailed questionnaire consisting of 36 questions which encompassed 429 items of information. The questionnaires were mailed to the 308 chief prosecutors by the Bureau of Justice Statistics in June 1995. Follow-up continued until December 1995. Of the 308 prosecutors' offices in the survey, 269 or 89 percent completed the questionnaire. For 6 offices that did not return the survey, selected information on total staff and total budget for 1994 was obtained by telephone.

SAMPLING INFORMATION

A list of all prosecutorial districts that handle felony cases was compiled from the approximately 3,100 counties and independent cities in the United States (total 2343). Except for Connecticut, prosecutorial districts can be comprised of one or more counties. To compile the list, statutes were reviewed for the 50 States and the District of Columbia to see how each State selects prosecutors and how prosecutors are organized (e.g., county, judicial district or geographical district).

The universe database listed the 2,343 prosecutorial districts, 1992 population figures, and 1992 Uniform Crime Reports Part I adult felony arrest data by county. From this file the U.S. Bureau of the Census drew a stratified systematic sample.

The 2,343 prosecutorial districts were grouped into 6 strata, depending on the number of Part I adult felony arrests in 1992. Within each stratum, districts were systematically selected for the sample. A sample of 308 districts was chosen that is expected to yield a coefficient of variation of about 2 percent for variables correlated with population and arrests.

Stratum Definition

(number of arrests)	Number of actual units	Number of sampled units
1 = 4,800 or more	94	94
2 = 2,700 to 4,799	71	41
3 = 1,100 to 2,699	186	50
4 = 450 to 1,099	329	46
5 = 150 to 449	511	36
6 = less than 150	1,152	41
	-----	-----
	2,343	308

WEIGHTING INFORMATION

Ideally, statistics computed using sample survey responses have an "analysis weight" for conversion of the sample results to statistics applicable to the entire population - in the NSP context, the entire population of felony prosecutors in State courts. The analysis weight of a sample case is the inverse of its probability of selection. For example, if a sample unit was chosen as the result of a take one of every ten units procedure, its probability is 0.1 and its weight is 10, i.e., it stands for itself and nine other similar units that were not chosen.

Because of the 1994 NSP sampled prosecutorial districts and not counties, the probability of selection for individual prosecutors is the same. Each chief prosecutor had only one chance to be in the sample.

Some statistical adjustment had to be made for the 33 out of 308 chief prosecutors who did not respond to the 1994 survey request. The adjustment method used was to recompute the analysis weight based on response rates, except for stratum 1 which included all those with certainty. To illustrate this method, suppose hypothetically that 10 percent of the chief prosecutors in a particular stratum were sampled, but only 8 percent responded. Then each respondent office had to represent itself and eleven others, rather than itself and nine others as originally planned. Hence, the sampling weight for those respondents would have to be 12.5 ($1/0.08$) rather than 10 ($1/0.10$).

The data file contains one analysis weight, V10.

DATA PROBLEMS

The results for question 25 on the original survey, which asked the chief prosecutors what legal mechanisms were available in their jurisdiction to transfer juveniles to criminal court, were not reported in the BJS publication entitled, Prosecutors in State Courts, 1994. Interpretation of the question and the four possible responses proved problematic. Consequently, these data were not reported. Users of the data set should be advised that V311, V312, V313, V314 and V315 should be interpreted with caution.

Several kinds of requested information were difficult for prosecutors' offices to provide. These primarily included caseload data, budget information, data related to the number of juvenile transfers. Thirty-eight percent of the surveyed offices did not provide any data on their caseload, and 19% did not provide their 1994 total budget for prosecutorial functions. Of the 202 offices that handled juvenile cases transferred to criminal court, 25% were unable to provide the number of cases.

FILE STRUCTURE

The NATIONAL PROSECUTORS SURVEY, 1994 data file is available from the ICPSR in single record per case format and has a logical record length (LRECL) of 629. There are 433 variables for the 275 cases.

A raw character data file, a machine-readable codebook, a data collection instrument available in Portable Document Format (PDF) and in hard copy, and SPSS and SAS data definition statements have been prepared for this collection. The SPSS data definition statements contain five parts: data list, variable labels, value labels, missing value, and missing value recode statements. The five SAS data definition statements--proc format, input, label, format and missing value recode statements--are contained in another file.

CODEBOOK INFORMATION

Below is an example of information appearing in the machine-readable codebook for a typical variable. The numbers in brackets do not appear in the actual codebook but are references to the descriptions which follow this example. Also, for this variable, numbers 9 and 13 do not appear in the body of the codebook. They are used here for illustrative purposes only.

- [5] Indicates the number of columns the variable occupies.
- [6] Indicates the code values of missing data. In this example, the code value of 9 is missing data (MISSING 9).
- [7] The implied decimal specification for the variable is denoted by the message "IMP DEC 0," where 0 is the number of decimal places implied in the variable.
- [8] This is the full text (question) supplied by the investigator to describe the variable. The question text and the numbers and letters that may appear at the beginning reflect the original wording of the questionnaire item.
- [9] Indicates an additional comment or explanation appended to the variable description. "Actual number is coded" appears in the codebook to indicate that the variable has been declared continuous. Does not appear in this particular variable.
- [10] Code frequencies.
- [11] Indicates the code values occurring in the data for this variable.
- [12] Indicates the textual definitions of the codes. An abbreviation commonly used in the code definitions "N/A" (Not Ascertained).
- [13] Descriptives for variables with wide ranges - number of cases with valid values for the variable, (in this variable, the number of cases is 266) mean, minimum, maximum, and the standard deviation. All cases with missing values were excluded from these descriptives. Does not appear in this particular variable.

ICPSR PROCESSING INFORMATION

The data collection was processed according to the standard ICPSR processing procedures. The data were checked for illegal or inconsistent code values which, when found, were recoded to missing data values. No consistency checks were performed. Statements bracketed in "[]" signs in the body of the codebook were added by the processor for explanatory purposes.
